

Music and Medicine: from wellbeing to care

Music and music therapy have long been used in our country across numerous clinical settings for the treatment of acute and chronic pathologies.

Italy boasts a considerable production of studies characterized by great scientific rigour. The meeting aims to disseminate and enhance the evidence achieved in this field by presenting some of the studies published in the last decade in scientific journals of particular relevance.

On Wednesday 19 April, as part of the "Music and Medicine: from well-being to treatment" series, a meeting will be held in Cremona, at the Violin Museum in Piazza Guglielmo Marconi 5.
